

Totally Awe-Sum Close-Up by Scott Creasey video DOWNLOAD

Inspired by Greg Arce's stage routine, 'Awe-Sum Total,' which in turn was inspired by Larry Becker's 'Sum Total.' Scott has taken Greg's original (with his permission) and adapted it for close-up table hopping without losing the impact of the original.

Five, five-digit numbers are displayed to the audience as a prediction. These numbers remain in full view throughout the routine and are not switched. The audience generates a random six-digit number in the hundreds of thousands, no forcing. The five prediction numbers are added together by an audience member using the calculator on his phone. The total matches the randomly generated number.

No finger flinging, no memory work, no complicated calculations. Fast reset and worked from your pockets. This Totally Awe-Sum Close-Up video download will teach you all you need to perform this and blow away your spectators!

"I've always been proud of this routine. I know it's devastated many a spectator and even mentalists. I love how Scott has taken the subtlety and method and turned it into a fantastic close-up routine. It takes very little space in your pocket, yet will play like a monster routine. Scott always amazes me with his construction of effects and methods. You are going to be thrilled when you see what he has put together."
