

Not So Sharp 2.0 by Wayne Fox and TCC Magic

The long-awaited return of Wayne Fox's Sharpie Pen effect is finally here in its 2.0 version, produced by TCC Team.

Take a Sharpie pen, visually roll it into a ball, splash it flat on the table, and finally stretch it all the way back!

Not So Sharp 2.0 is a perfect addition to routines using a regular Sharpie pen, such as a signed card routine.

At the end of the performance, you pick up the Sharpie and casually roll it between your palms, and it surprisingly turns into a ball. You then pick up the ball and smack it on the table, and the ball just now turns into a splat. Finally, you stretch it all the way back to a regular Sharpie.

With Not So Sharp 2.0, you can surprise the audience anytime, anywhere. It can be presented as a standalone routine or combined in your performance, such as turning the Sharpie into a ball and then back into a Sharpie or directly smacking the Sharpie into a splat. Change the shape of the Sharpie at your fingertips flexibly.

The props are made of high-quality resin and are perfectly molded to achieve a better shape and texture. The shape of the two gimmicks is molded specifically to achieve a similar feeling when you actually roll up a piece of clay or splash it flat on the table.

In the tutorial, Wayne will teach all the details of handling it, which is simple and practical, and almost anyone can use it immediately.
