

Chinese Coin Palace - Small

A wooden double compartment box with two lids is shown. The doors are opened to show the box is empty. Then a small size Chinese coin is introduced and placed into the left compartment of the box and the doors are closed. The box is then tilted, and the door to that compartment is opened. The Chinese coin is seen to have vanished. The audience is not impressed, because they have seen the Chinese coin slide to the opposite compartment through the open space between the two doors. They ask the magician to open the door to the other compartment. The magician closes the door to the first compartment then tilts the box, (the audience again sees the Chinese coin sliding over), then opens the door to the adjacent compartment to show that it is empty. This business of sliding Chinese coins from one compartment to the other is repeated, till the audience is howling for both doors to be opened at a time. After some play, the magician opens both doors of the box and it is completely empty. The Chinese coin has completely vanished. The Chinese coin is then produced from any other place.
