

Die Box - Window

Similar effect to the traditional "Die Box", but with a significant addition! The audience always sees the cube move from one compartment to the other!

The magician shows a cube and places it inside a hat (or a box) that is shown empty. He opens the box and shows it from all sides. He takes the cube from the hat and puts it in one of the two compartments in the box. He closes the doors and asks the audience which compartment the cube is in. He opens that compartment and... there is nothing. He repeats this a few times but... the spectators never guess. The most attentive will notice that the magician, each time, tilts the box to one side or the other and will see, thanks to the two windows on the doors, that the cube slides from one compartment to the other. However, the amazement is great when the magician opens both doors and there is no longer any trace of the cube! Even more incredible will be when the magician makes the cube appear from the hat that was shown empty.!
