

Airplane Mode by Twister Magic - Bühnentrick

The spectator is invited to participate in a mind-blowing experience, during which he will go on a journey using his imagination. First, the magician mentions a pamphlet that we always see on the plane, but never read. That pamphlet is the emergency handbook, which can save us in case of accidents, the information in it is important, then the magician invites the spectator to actually open and read the pamphlet, while the spectator does so, the magician turns to the audience to say that now a destination will be secretly chosen to which the spectator would like to travel.

Now the magician shows several boarding passes with different tourist destinations, boarding groups and seat numbers. The spectator chooses one completely randomly and the journey begins. The pilot announces that he is ready to take off and asks you to fasten your seat belt and relax because it will be a long journey. The magician asks the spectator to close his eyes, but a second later he asks him to open them (there is a baby in the back seat crying), then to relax he shows him a list of different drinks, from which he will have to choose one at random.

The magician now shows a tray with a bag and invites the spectator to say out loud the drink he has chosen (example: whiskey). When the magician lifts the paper bag, he has failed because it only contains orange juice. Now he asks the spectator to take the magazine on the planes where the movies are published and to secretly choose one. Now he asks him to focus on the movie, the main actor, the soundtrack and other details, magically the magician begins to read the mind of the spectator revealing one by one all the things he is thinking, then the magician guesses the exact number of the seat on the plane where he is sitting, his boarding group and finally the arrival of the flight to a city and a country that the magician guesses correctly is announced, to conclude with a question: is destiny already written? Or do we write it?

At the beginning the magician showed an emergency leaflet and asked the spectator to read it, but did the spectator actually read it? Now when he flips through the emergency leaflet he can see in the pictures printed on the leaflet everything that just happened, all the free choices made printed on the paper and, to be even more sure, the magician opens the leaflet and it turns into a giant poster that reveals everything that just happened in the routine!

But wait, there is more, now the magician asks the spectator again what drink he had originally chosen, the spectator will say whiskey and now the magician, with great surprise, will lift the orange juice box, which will turn out to be just a giant cover, to show that from the beginning of the show there was a glass of whiskey inside. Maybe our fate is already written, don't you think?
